VA Attorneys are Returning to the Office, How Kalfus is Ensuring Safety of Staff and Clients

Kalfus & Nachman Puts You First

Throughout the pandemic, the legal industry did not cease. People continued to get injured in car accidents, were hurt on the job, and became eligible for social security disability. Law offices had to adapt and learn to visit with clients remotely and represent clients virtually with the courts.

In March of 2020, the Supreme Court of Virginia declared a judicial emergency, essentially ceasing the operations of the Virginia courts. Courthouses were closed, and cases were continued. The Supreme Court of Virginia extended the emergency operations over 20 times, causing an extreme backlog in the legal system. Our team at Kalfus & Nachman, PC, has been consistent in our commitment to our clients, attorneys, and staff. We immediately moved in-person conferences to virtual meetings. Our staff was on a rotation of working from home and at the office to abide by social distancing concerns. We continued to seamlessly give our clients excellent legal services to address their legal issues. Kalfus & Nachman was one of the first law firms in the state to have virtual trials before the General District Courts prior to their opening to the public.

Kalfus & Nachman reopened our office to the public as soon as the Governor gave us the approval. Knowing many of our clients may have underlying conditions which made them particularly vulnerable to COVID-19, we took immediate precautions to protect our clients and staff. Our precautions were successful. We continued to give the best service to our clients, even though the insurance company and government employees were working remotely, causing an additional delay to the system. We also developed creative ways to engage alternative dispute resolutions to continue to get our client's cases settled with excellent results. The pandemic may have caused the legal industry to slow down; however, it did not slow down our commitment to our clients at Kalfus & Nachman.

Our dedication to your safety and the success of your case has remained consistent throughout the pandemic. Even when the world stops, disability and personal or work-related injuries do not. Contact Kalfus & Nachman today at (855) 880-8163 or through the form on this page to schedule your free consultation. Our experienced Virginia lawyers are here to help you. Know we are here for you even during these difficult times and have taken all possible steps to ensure your health and safety while maximizing our ability to continue to serve our clients.

3 Things Motorcyclists Wish They Realized Earlier

Picking a bike for your skill level can save your life.

As the prospective owner of a new motorcycle, we understand how tempting it is to want the most high-end bike you can find. When you're a new rider, it's best to be humble - stick with a bike that fits your financial situation as well as your skill level and experience. You can always upgrade later on!

Skimping out on the gear isn't worth it.

No one expects you to envelop yourself in bubble wrap every time you go for a ride, but at the very least, always keep your helmet on. If you really value your bodily safety, opt in for additional safety gear - from knee pads to high visibility gear to outerwear made of thicker material to protect you from road rash in the event of an accident. Studies have proven helmet wearing to decrease the likelihood of an accident turning fatal by 37%!

Speed is overrated.

Riding a motorcycle is historically associated with speeding, but that fact is exactly what contributes to making it such a deadly hobby. Riding a motorcycle is 27% more deadly than operating a car. Speed is a major contributor to this statistic by far, though a lack of proper safety gear and careful driving habits only makes it worse.

Start off on the right foot when you dive into the world of motorcycles by learning from the mistakes of more experienced riders!

If you or a family member has been injured in a pedestrian accident, bicycle accident or car accident, or any personal injury, or has been denied Social Security Disability benefits, it's important to get an attorney experienced in these types of cases involved immediately. Call 800-361-0430 for your initial free consultation. Kalfus & Nachman PC, Personal Injury Attorney in Norfolk, can help you determine whether you need a lawyer for any personal injury case.

K&N Furry Friends

This month's pet is Howl-o-ween, a young male shorthaired cat with lots of love to give! Howl has been with us since, you guessed it, October. He's a sweet, loving cat who started his journey here with severe skin issues. After struggling to diagnose and treat his skin problems, we found that Howl-o-ween is FIV+ which means that his immune system doesn't work as well as the immune systems of other cats. Now that his skin issues have been resolved, Howl-o-ween is ready for a home of his own! He loves people and gets along with other pets.
